"Shorty" Rogers Bound Over to Court.

FOUND IN WAYNE COUNTY

son of the late Warwick M. Rogers, making a total of foreign born, 1,393. pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery be fore Mayor Wise Friday afternoon, and being unable to give $500 bail was taken to the county jail to await hearing in common pleas court. When the mayor asked Rogers if he desired counsel, he said that no lawyer could help him. The minimum penalty for this crime is one year in the penitentiary. Rogers forged the name of Heimann Brothers to. a check for $10.50 on the Union National Bank, of this city. He cashed the forged check at the McCullough grocery, on the Newman road, on Saturday, taking merchandise worth $5.50 and the remainder in money.

A member of the McCullough family brought the check to Massillon Monday. The bank authorities, before cashing it, communicated with Heimann Brothers, who declared it a forgery. The matter was then placed in the hands of the mayor, and on Thursday afternoon, AIRED BEFORE ASSEMBLY Marshal Kitchen arrested Rogers at Honeytown, a small village near Woos Delegate Pahlau Now Declares That ter. It is a very clumsy forgery, and no one but a person knowing little about checks would have accepted it as genuine. It was not completely dated, was not numbered and bore no signature other than the firm name. Rogers is a boilermaker by trade. and; until a few weeks ago, was employed by the W. & L. E. Railway Company. He is commonly known as "Shorty."

INSPECTION OF MILITIA.

As the Commander-in-Chief of the Ohio National Guard, the Chief Executive is now Visiting Their Camps -Thinks McKinley is Stronger and Bryan Weaker Than Before.

Governor George K. Nash quietly arrived in the city at 2 o'clock Saturday morning, and as quietly left it, after a brief rest at the Hotel Conrad, for New Philadelphia, where as commander-inchief of the Ohio National Guard, he will pay the Eighth regiment, now in camp there, an official visit. Governor Nash, on Friday, inspected the Second regiment at its Lima encampment. He expects to visit the encampment of every regiment in the state. Governor Nash was accompanied by Lieutenant Colonel Moulton Houk, of Toledo, a member of Colonel Dick's staff. Adjutant General Geiger will join the governor at New Philadelphia.

Few persons in the city were aware of the presence of the governor. Men jostled him in their morning hurry at the hotel, none dreaming that they were elbow to elbow with the first man in the state. "It is not disappointing," said the governor to a reporter. "We didn't stop to tell anybody we were here when we came, and we haven't done much advertising this morning. It's too hot for unnecessary exertion. Governor Nash says that his tour-of inspection of the militia of the state has shown him a wonderful improvement in the organization. "The late war," said he. "completely demoralized the guard. Almost every man in the militia went to the front, and thus the home guards became disorganized. We are getting into the ranks a fine class of young fellows now, however, and I was much gratified at the general good condition that prevailed." The governor asked many questions about the Massillon company, and expressed regret upon hearing of the hitch which has interfered with its organization being completed. He will give the matter his attention upon returning to Columbus.

When the campaign was referred to. the Governor remarked that the weather was to hot to either talk or think about politics, though his subsequent remarks suggested that he. I have not been over the state very much of late, but where I have been there seeems to be a feeling that Mc-Kinley will be re-elected. In my mind there is no doubt in the matter The campaign may be lively, but I don't think we need be uneasy. President McKinley is stronger than ever. and Bryan is weaker, in my opinion.'

AT THE MURRAY SCHOOL.

Two Hundred People Attend the Second Annual Reunion.

About two hundred former pupils, teachers and their friends attended the second annual reunion of the Murray school, on the plains south of Massillon, Thursday. The exercises of the day, under the direction of President Henry Sinnock, consisted of speeches by the Rev. E. E. Noble, of Wilmot: the Rev. John I. Wilson, of Massillon; Represen tative C. G. Metzger, of Richville, and former teachers Austin Camp, J. W. Gillam and Clifford Camp. The address of David Murray, Esq., was listened to with intense interest. Mr. Murray is now four score and four, and has always been active in promoting the best interests of the school that bears his name. All the old boys and girls were glad to greet him.

Musical numbers were furnished by Mrs. W. D. Roller and her son, of Minerva, Miss Mamie Yost, of near Richville, and a concert graphophone operated by C. J. Duncan, of Massillon. A ball game between picked nines was a feature of the afternoon. Letters of regret were received from the Rev. C. E. Miller, editor of the Christian World, Dayton; Dr. V. Leeper, Albany, Ore.; C. G. Smith, of Gallapolice: Miss Abbie McLaughlin, of Alliance; Miss Harriet Morrow, of Montgomery, Mo.; and Johnathan Welker, of Norwalk, Wis. Mr. Welker enjoys the distinction of being the oldest pupil of the school. An elegant table dinner was served in the woods adjoining the school yard and many of the old pupils enjoyed pointing out the old landmarks on the play grounds. L. L. Volkmor took two pietures of the assembly.

The thanks of the association are due Meuser Bros., Russell & Company, G. C. Leeper, the Misses Ada Camp and Olive Smith and all others who helped make the meeting a success. The next meeting will be held at the same place on the second Thursday in August. On motion of C. C. Camp, the present officers were re-elected for one year. The exercises of the day closed by singing "God be with You."

Minister Conger's statement that the imperial troops continue to fire upon the legations is surprising in view of the representations which have been made to the state department recently by the imperial government, through Minister Wu and from other sources, which have indicated that the imperial troops ceased firing on the legations when the armistice was declared on July 17, three weeks ago. The attitude of the Chinese government has radically changed or else it has not acted in good faith

Governor Thomas, of Colorado, who made the address notifying Mr. Stevenson of his nomination, treely admits that Bryan is not as strong in the West as he was four years ago, and that Colorado, which gave the Democratic candidate 130,000 majority in 1896, is hardly expected to give him anything in excess of 60,000 this fall. The reasons given by Governor Thomas to account for this talling off fare worth noting. He says that many of the Republicans who were are back in line now, and that the majority of the people believe that the Philippine policy of the McKinley administration is about right seeks to fool voters into thinking that the election of a Republican president this fall means that the first step will have been taken toward the creation of an empire. This is the issue set forth in the Indianapolis speech. It is cunningly devised and arranged, but it cannot be made paramount to the issue of Bryan himself, his erroneous views of public questions and his numerous vagaries, which if put into operation would keep the country in a continual state of ferment and uncertainty, and would plunge the American people into poverty and distress.

BRYAN AND SILVER.

Voters who have been misled by Brythat the Democratic candidate does not intend to renew his assault upon the honesty of the American dollar and the financial credit of the United States, should read Walter Wellman's account of an interview he had with Mr. Bryan at the close of the Kansas City convention, which occurs in an article in the current number of the Review of Reviews. From this interview Mr. Wellman was assured that Bryan not only believes that he did the right thing when he insisted that the Democratic platform should contain a distinct declaration of adherence to the doctrine of 16 to 1, but that he is entitled to the merement of a good action, and will get it. Not the least part of his motive, according to Mr. Wellman, was a desire to place himself in vivid contrast with a mistaken conception which many people have formed of his revival for the presidency. To all who look upon Mr McKinley as deficient in moral backbone. Mr. Bryan tried to say, by his heroic mastery of the elements of reaction and silver conservatism at Kansas formerly out of line with their party City: "Behold me' I am strong enough to hold the faith. I stand by my principles at any cost." Mr. Bryan thinks he has gained immeasurably in public esteem by this attitude. He believes he has made a moral hero of himself.

Mr. Wellman says. "Mr. Bryan is in earnest If his party thinks it has sidewas glad to seize upon ex-Consul Charles tracked silver, and if successful at the polls will be able to bury it in some ing his way through the city as a com- dusty legislative pigeon-hole, it is reckoning without Mr. Bryan: for he tells his friends that, after he is inaugurated. he will insist that congress repeal the gold standard law and enact a free-coinage 16 to 1 statute. ITALY'S NEW SOVEREIGN

Characteristics of Victor Emmanuel, Humbert's Only Child.

NICKNAMED THE LITTLE PRINCE.

Term Denoted Affection as Much as Description-Story of His Attachment to His Mother-His Beautiful Queen Elena.

Victor Emmanuel III, who, as his only child, succeeds King Humbert I as king of Italy, is now in his thirtyfirst year, having been born Nov. 11, an's Indianapolis speech into thinking 1869 He is slight and short of stature, though not so short as is generally believed, for the nickname "Il Principino" ("the Little Prince") was given to him when he was a child and denoted affection as much as description, says the New York Sun. As a matter of fact, he was taller than his father and mother, but did not have the broad shoulders that lent impressiveness to the figures of his parents when they were seated or on horseback. branch of the family. They were very noticeable in his father, King Humbert, and his mother. Queen Margherita, and in his grandfather, King Victor Emmanuel II.

The new king is not bad looking, but his blondish hair and light blue eyes made him seem insignificant by the side of his strikingly strong faced father and mother, with their masses of black hair and their magnificent eyes. King Humbert's occhioni-his big eyes that seemed to look through and through you-were known from one end of Italy to the other. After the crown prince's marriage there was another unflattering contrast with the splendid figure of his Montenegrin

As a child he was very delicate and the greatest care had to be taken of his health. His mother's devotion to him and his attachment to her are well known. A story has often been told of the necklace of pearls that Queen Margherita wears constantly. She found out that the little prince was not spending his pocket money and fearing that he was developing stingy habits scolded him. Later she found that he had bought the necklace had paid for it, pearl by pearl, out of his allowance. The story has been told of a coral bead necklace as well, but those who have seen the necklace say that it is of pearls, which in Itala small crown prince's allowance would not put a coral necklace out of his reach.

The crown prince's health was not allowed to interfere with his studies; he was, moreover, naturally inclined to books and he has the reputation of being one of the best informed princes in Europe. He has made a hobby of collecting coins, and numismatics is a pursuit that requires a good deal of learning. From early childhood, however, he showed a strong sense of his position, which kept back the people around him, and an ambition to do everything that pertained to his office, however distasteful. He insisted on doing his full duty as a soldier, and, in spite of dissussion from many sides, has performed the duties of the several ranks to which he has been promoted. Up to the end of last year he was lieutenant general in command of the Tenth division, stationed at Naples. As a commanding officer he has the reputation of being a strict disciplinarian and is none too popular among the officers, though the soldiers like

It is also pretty generally believed that he is set in his ways and obstinate at times and that no one can move a country like Italy, where politics cessions and compromises. It is possible, however, that King Victor Emmanuel III will show himself to be a differ-Humbert, when he came to the throne, youthful excesses.

Personally very little scandal attaches to the new king. For this his delicate health accounts in part, for of their men, who are as brave as any he has always been keenly awake to in the world, 20 per cent would run the necessity that he should live to carry on his father's work. Courts nowadays are not much different from what they were in past centuries, though it is no longer correct form to dwell on their intrigues, and plenty of temptations were put in the way of the Italian crown prince. It is very likely in health, being able to do their duty that he has not resisted them all, but and having intense motives to do it, but at any rate no great amount of scandal has been attached to his name.

THE INDULGENT FATHER.

An Account of One That Colonel Califper Knew In Storkville Center, Vt.

"Speaking of indulgent fathers," said Colonel Calliper, "reminds me of an old friend of mine named Silas Zingtock, who formerly lived in Storkville Centre, Vt. Once when his little son Rufus wanted very much to fly a kite at a time when he was not well enough to be permitted to go out Mr. Zingtock rigged up a contrivance whereby the youngster's desire could be gratified in the house. "About one minute after Rufus did touch it on this morning when he wanted it to blow harder the big fan was going at a gait that set up a hurricane in the parlors. It blew the kite against one of the windows and broke that the first thing, and within a minute the pictures were off the walls and their glasses smashed, tables were upset, bric-a-brac was knocked into flinders, and the whole parlor was a wreck, with the big blower going at top speed and churning everything there into fragments and blowing the debris out of the windows.

NEW ORLEANS POLITENESS.

The houses were dark and I could not see the numbers, and it was only by the number that the lady could identify her boarding place, as she had only been there once.

"Ahead of me was a small man. I asked him if he knew where the number was. He answered very politely that he did not, but was going that way and would help me hunt. He told another man in front of him about it, and that man told some of his friends. In a few minutes the gentlemen had formed an advance guard in our interest. We walked calmly behind while they went in front, on either side of the street. striking matches and looking for the number. There were eight of them, and their matches would go off one after the other. It was a regular flambeau parade. I was overcome. 'Here it is,' shouted an advance scout.

"We approached the house rapidly and found the eight gentlemen standing before it. It was almost with emotion that I raised my hat and thanked them for their efforts. 'Nothing at all,' they said politely, and the entire eight raised their hats and walked into the darkness."-New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Military Courage.

The question of the comparative proportion of really brave men in any army will probably never be determined. Great officers on the continent keep their knowledge on that subject rigorously as a professional secret and assume as a certainty that all soldiers are tial will admit, as Marshal von Moltke once did in public, that with a great number it takes discipline, and severe discipline, too, to induce them to face shells unshrinkingly. American officers have been known to acknowledge that sway if they could, and in every army, even ours, which a man enters only of free will, there is a certain proportion who literally cannot overcome their lears. They are stricken with a sort of paralysis. The proportion is probably not high in any army, the majority, if aeither is the proportion high of those who literally feel no fear.—London

Suicides and Crossroads.

It has been suggested that suicides were buried at crossroads because it was usual to erect a cross at such places. Those who were excluded from holy rites were buried there as the place next in sanctity to consecrated ground. It was an old superstition that the devil danced at crossroadsand that the erection of a cross thereat would prevent such unseemly practices. From this or some other superstition, such as the fear that his ghost might walk the earth, arose the custom of driving a stake through the suicide's body.

These plausible theories have gained many advocates, but it is more likely that burial at crossroads was intended! as a mark of indignity. The temples, or rather altars, of the heathen Teutons were mostly at the junction of crossroads. The place of execution was there, and criminals were sacrificed to the gods; hence suicides were buried at the crossroads to give as strong an impression as possible of heathen burial. Probably, too, the publicity of such a spot, which insured the fact that a great number of people would become directly aware of the degrading consequences of the crime, had a good deal to do with its selec-

A curious fact in this connection is to be found in Plato's Laws (book ix, chapter 12). The murderer of any of his near kin, after being put to death, was "cast out of the city, naked, in an appointed place where three roads meet, and let all the magistrates, in behalf of the whole state, carry each a stone and hurl it at the head of the dead body."

Facts About Postage Stamps.

Hardly more than 50 years ago Uncle Sam began the use of postage stamps. At that time they were sold in solid sheets, and the letter writer who didn't have a pair of scissors handy frequently spoiled several stamps and his temper in the bargain in his effort to get one whole stamp for postage. Loss and inconvenience from this cause were so great that the government offered a liberal prize for a device which would overcome the nuisance. The first machine submitted cut the stamps entirely apart, but the perforating machine was soon after adopted by the postoffice department and has been in use ever since.

Years ago, before people learned to use a sponge instead of licking a stamp, great care was used in providing exceptionally good paper and mucilage. The government has since saved money by adopting cheaper materials. The annual disposal of postage stamps in the United States is enormous. During the year ending June 30, 1891, the government received $41,432,129.50 income from letter east. Arriving in New York city, he postage. A GRAY DAY.

Within the woodland's comber depth A faint, sweet note awakes and dies. The west wind on its mission sighs, While cloudy billows northward roll Across the low, gray skies.

The sounds that made the woodland gay Awhile, as if with grief, are mute; The linnet has no heart to sing, And silent is the blackbird's flute; Naught stirs save that faint note of song And and Æolian lute. -Sam Wood in Chambers' Journal.

As James Dale looked more like a judge than a colonel, they called him as I have said. He was a mine owner, and when things went wrong he could make hot times for his engineers and foremen, but he didn't do 4 in a vulgar way. He was always a gentleman even when he cussed the hardest. As a matter of fact, the judge's motto was "good form," and he carried it out in his clothes, his cigars, his dinner and the way be took the news when a fall of rock in the Emma mine buried 12 men at once. What he said on that occasion was, "Please wipe your feet on the rug next time." What he did was to fill out 12 checks for $1,000 apiece for the respective widows.

I have it on good authority that Judge Dale was not vulgarly startled when he received word from Denver that his bandsome wife, to whom he had been married five years and who was visiting friends, had taken an old lover's arm and severed conjugal relations by eloping. Others got the news about the same time, and they couldn't find anything to criticise in his conduct. He went through the daily routine just the same for three or four days, and he had the same placid look and the same even voice as he called his head clerk into the private office and said:

."Thomas, I am going away for a few days, and you will take charge." "Yes, sir," replied Thomas, and next morning the judge was on his way to Denver. He picked up his clew there without having elbowed anybody or soiled the polish of his shoes. He met friends and talked politics and real estate and mines, and, lighting a fresh eigar, he took a train for the at the top of his voice that he was an injured husband thirsting for gore. "My God, John, but there is the judge!"

The man looked, and the color went out of his cheeks, and his jaw fell. Near the foot of the table sat the man who had taken a new name. He was cool and placid, and only the ghost of a smile hovered around his mouth. He looked the woman and the man full in the eyes for a minute, but made no sign of recognition.

"What is it?" asked the captain as 'Mrs. Bemis" shuddered and gasped and seemed on the point of fainting. "A-a sudden illness-heart trouble!"

she stammered as she left the table for her stateroom, followed by her supposed husband. There were wonder and curiosity, but little was said. "Good form" demands that such incidents be passed over as easily as possible. There were those who thought it might be heart trouble and others who suspected the presence of the "major" had something to do with it, but that was no place to compare notes. Neither of the pair was seen again that evening, though Major Davis was very much in evidence until a late hour. At breakfast next morning Mr. Bemis appeared alone. His wife was better, thank you, was his reply to inquirers, but thought it best to remain quiet for a day or two. Not once did he let his eyes roam around the table, but he knew that Major Davis was there among the rest. He knew that a pair of steel blue eyes were scanning his troubled face and that a pair of soft white hands were aching to grip his throat. After breakfast, as the men sought the smoking room, Mr. Bemis started to act on a plan which had doubtless been talked over with his wife. He walked straight up to Major Davis and began:

"Judge, I don't know what I can say in extenuation, but 1"-"Excuse me, sir," interrupted the ether, "but you have evidently made mistake. I think the gentleman called the judge has passed into the salon."

Mr. Bemis looked at the major like man seeing the face of death in a nightmare, and beads of perspiration started out on his forehead.

"Your-your wife is better this morn ing, I think I heard you say?" queried the major in courteous tones.

"Glad to hear it. She should beware of overexcitement. Weather seems to have settled, and we are making a fine run of it. Have a light? No?. Well, I'll walk a little."

Mr. Bemis stared after him as if seeing a ghost, and his breath came in sobs as he finally turned away. He had seen the man whose home he had despeiled a dozen times or more, and he believed that Judge Dale stood before him. Still there might be a chance that it was simply a wonderful resemblance. Such things had been known. It must have been this faint hope that buoyed up the wife to appear that afternoon. A wife should be able to identify the face, figure and speech of the husband of even a fortnight, but the elopers hoped for a miracle. Major Davis had made several acquaintances, and Mrs. Bemis had no sooner appeared than he was ready to be introduced.

"I am honored," he said as he made his bow. "Permit me to offer my sincere congratulations on your speedy recovery."

"I-I thank you." "It was your husband I met this morning, I believe, and for a moment he took me for some one else. It is queer how you'll often find two people looking so much alike as to deceive you at first glance."

"Y-yes, it is!" she stammered, leaning on the back of a chair for support and speaking through bloodless lips.

"You do not find in me a resemblance to any gentleman called the judge?" he queried as he looked her full in the

"N-no-that is"--

"But I am keeping you. Pray, be seated, and I think I see your husband coming this way. Hope the fine weath er will put you in good spirits."

At every meal Major Davis faced the guilty pair. Some of the passengers suspected nothing, but others insisted that there was a queer mystery afoot. The major gave nothing away. It wouldn't have been good form. The woman avoided him as far as possible, but two or three times a day he found excuse to speak to her. If she had hoped for a miracle, her hopes were dashed at the first close sight of him. Major Davis was Judge Dale, and Judge Dale was the husband she had fled from and disgraced. She knew him for a quiet man, but also for an implacable one. He was torturing them at the stake, but that would not Bemis again attempted to approach the man he had wronged. He couldn't it easily credible that she would prov for the woman.

"Judge, it was my fault, and on me should fall your vengeance," he said as he cornered his man.

"Mistaken again. Ha, ha, ha!" laughed the major. "Really, but I shall come to think that I am your judge's twin brother. See what a cloudless sky and how beautiful the sea. I trust that your wife has had no more trouble with her heart. She is not looking at all well."

"God! God! But what a man!" gasped Bemis as he turned away with a hunted look in his eves.

The steamer was to call at the Azores. One morning about 10 o'clock she made harbor, and it was given out aboard that she would not get away before midnight. Everybody was anxious for a brief run ashore—everybody but Mrs. Bemis. She feared that she might overexert and bring on another attack of heart trouble. Mr. Bemis had decided to stay with her when Major Davis hunted him out and said:

"I trust you will make one of a little party going ashore, and that you will bring your revolver along, as I shall mine?"

"The party is-is"- began Mr. Bemis as his face blanched.

"A very exclusive one-just the two of us, you see. You have a pistol, I suppose?"

"Ah, of course! We may find game. you know. Do you wish to speak to your wife first?"

"No." "She's gone to lie down, eh? Well, let's be off."

The two engaged a boat as soon as landing and pulled away to a wooded cape, and two hours later a dead man was brought back in the boat. It was Mr. Bemis. He had accidentally shot himself while shooting at a bird, or at least the major said so, and no one doubted his word. He told his tale without excitement. He was cool and his attention to astronomy and has just serene as he announced that he would remain and see the body placed in its grave. He came aboard the steamer faction that Kepler, Newton, Coperniwith the personal effects of the deceased, but he did not ask to see Mrs. Bemis. She was in her stateroom under the doctor's care, and none of the passengers saw her again. When the major the usual hour and in the usual way

A PEKING HEROINE.

How a Plucky American Girl Saved # Party From Boxers.

How many heroic deeds have been performed by the besieged foreigners in Peking probably no one will ever know, but at least one story of heroism found its way out from the capital of the Middle Kingdom before communication was entirely cut off. In this instance a California girl was the heroine. She is the sister of Supervisor Eugene McCarthy of San Francisco and the wife of A. F. Chamot, who for the past five years has been proprietor of the Peking hotel and of the only for eign store in the Chinese capital.

News reached Peking early in June of the peril of a company of French railway officials at the town of Chaug-Hsin-Tien, and Mrs. Chamot, aided by women in the different embassies, organized a relief expedition consisting of nine persons, for whom the French minister, M. Pinchon, secured a military escort from the Chinese government. The intrepid California woman went out as the moving spirit of the little party. After a prolonged absence, which became agonizing to the friends waiting in Peking, the rescuers returned, bringing with them 40 Europeans, the survivors of 45, who had fought off 300 Boxers for two days and two nights. Mrs. Chamot was Miss Lizzie Mc-Carthy, a San Francisco girl by birth and by education. On the 15th of last March she left this country to rejoin her husband in Peking after a visit of a year to her mother and brother here. She is a fine type of the outdoor, athletic western girl. She is a crack shot with both rifle and pistol, can row as well as a man, can sail a boat like a skillful yachtsman and, according to her brother's description; is absolutely fearless. Before she moved to China she frequently went to the Shell Mound ranges with her brother and scored bullseyes with a reliability that makes

SAYS THE SUN MOVES.

Distinguished Soldier and Scientist Revives an Old Theory.

It is no slight achievementat such a time as this, when a presidential campaign is on and war news is coming from three-quarters of the globe, to divert public attention to such a time worn theme as an attack on the Copernican theory. Yet this is what General John Watts de Peyster has done. He reasserts the old declaration that "the sun do move" and backs up his statement by quoting a distinguished German astronomer who holds that the earth is fixed in space while the sun does a daily turn around our planet.
